The Equality Act: Risks and Opportunities

The Equality Act: Risks and Opportunities

In this interactive session Stephen Miller and his colleague Kirsty Graydon will present in-depth analysis of the appeal cases which have shaped the way we understand the structure of the Equality Act.

One criticism of the Act is that it presents too many overlapping claim options. Claimants can be spoilt for choice and advisers need to choose carefully between the choices available.

Delegates will learn what features to watch for and how best to prepare for litigation in the Employment Tribunal on topics which are often the most complex and valuable for practitioners to handle.

The session will feature discussions on disability, sex, age and race as well as equal pay and a summary of the other protected characteristics.
