Personal Injury and Clinical Negligence Case Workshop

In this fast moving, two-part interactive session, Iain Nicol and Ann Logan from Balfour Manson, will take you on a practical tour of the current landscape within both areas of law.

With particular focus on their own personal caseload and experience and through examination of recent decisions, this seminar will give you the opportunity to discuss recent developments with your peers within the profession and also to identify risk and avoid any potential pitfalls.

Part 1- Personal Injury Workshop

Road traffic accidents, work accidents and public liability claims are the bread and butter of many personal injury practitioners. Whilst there are underlying basic principles for the handling of these types of claims, they can throw up unusual issues in terms of liability and causation. We will look at a number of case studies in small groups to consider the issues, prospects of success, and potential difficulties in each claim.

Part 2- Current issues in Clinical Negligence litigation in Scotland

The success of a clinical negligence case depends to a large degree on the expert evidence obtained from healthcare professionals, and this requires careful instruction of the correct expert. We will consider the duties and role of an expert witness, what the expert needs in their instructions, what documents to submit for consideration, how the report should be set out, and the use of documentation to support the expert opinion.

The event begins at 2pm. Delegate registration is open from 1:30pm
