Civil Litigation Expenses

It is now over four years since the Taylor Report proposed quite sweeping changes to the system of funding and expenses for civil litigation. We now have the Civil Litigation (Expenses and Group Proceedings) Bill about to come into force in the near future and various proposals which ultimately will require changes to the Sheriff Court and Court of Session Rules to implement. In certain areas such as summary assessment of expenses the Courts have already taken proactive steps. What changes are likely to come in and when? How should we adapt to these as civil court practitioners? What will be the opportunities and the pitfalls for us? Tim Edward has been a practitioner for over 25 years and will try to assess what the new landscape has in store.

The seminar will cover the following:

- Update on the Civil Litigation (Expenses and Group Proceedings) Bill 2017
- What is happening with other recommendations of the Taylor Report on Expenses?
- Additional Fees, Interest on Expenses, Counsel's Fees
- Summary Assessment of Expenses and Expenses Management
- QOCS and Multi Party Actions
